

My Freetime/Hobby's

by Josh Davis

This is an essay for 8th grade english Ron Paul curriculum

I have an interest in coding and computer science. I am also interested in graphic design. I started to code when I was 8 years old on a website called scratch:
<https://scratch.mit.edu/users/endermanjd/> It is a block coding website that is very good for starters. I recommend it to anyone who wants to start coding but wants something easy at first. When I turned 10 or so I started to learn html and javascript. From there I started using an engine called unity to make games on.

I haven't been learning for long, about 2 months, but I've been learning Russian. There is no specific reason other than it is fun. I am able to talk to Russians on xbox which is pretty fun. I really like it. Its a fun language to learn because it has a different alphabet that english does, so you have to learn new symbols and sounds.

I have been doing jiujitsu for 2 and a half years now, and I learn tai boxing off an on from my dad since I was 6. Marshal arts is very fun for me and keeps me in good shape. Next week I am traveling to Washington state for an advanced fighting class called ECQC. I am supposed to be the youngest one to ever take the class (13). I am nervous and exited at the same time.
